JAIL FOR FLACKS.

The Ex-Sheriff and His Boy Must Serve Out Their Terms.

Their Sentences Affirmed in Supreme Court General Term.

that O'Grady received his injuries about 11 o'clock last night while the excursion boat was on the return trip down the East River. Four augar-house men were upinted out to the policemen as the principals in the fight against the Flacks, father and son, and they will be compelled to spend the prescribed time behind prison bars.

The decision also covers the case of Joseph Meeks, but that gentleman scented the trouble afar off, withdrew his request for a stay of execution, went to the Tombs, served his time, paid his fine and now has his punishment behind him.

James A. Flack, though but recently the Sheriff of the greatest country of the world, must go to the Tombs for two months and pay a fine of $500 or stay there 500 days longer.

"Will" Flack, the bulging-eyed, fatheaded son who, as his part of the compapiracy, duped his own mother and procured her signature to the divorce complaint by misleading her into the idea that the paper was a part of a deed of a house from her husband to her, by this decision goes to Blackwell's Island Penitentiary for four months, which will be lengthened by 500 days more if he does not also pay a fine of $500.

The conspirators were sentenced by Justice Stribelly Horse Presiding Justice Party and obtained a stay of execution.

The conspirators were sentenced by Justice Berrett March 31, but their compsel, ex-Judge Horace Rinssell and John H. Eiri, went immediately before Presiding Justice Van Prunt and obtained a stay of execution.

The conspirators were sentenced by Justice Barrett March 31, but their counsel, ex-Judge Horace Russell and John H. Eird, went immediately before Presiding Justice Van Brunt and obtained a stay of execution of the sentence. The convicted enlipriss were then admitted to bail in $7,500 each. After a few days, however, Joseph Mecks, the referes in the begus divorce proceedings, concluded that he would take his punishment like a man, and in his case, by his motion, the stay was vacated, and he went to the Tombs, where he was confined the prescribed thirty days.

Judge Russell argued the motion for a new trial, taking the ground that Justice Barrett did wrong in instructing the jury that the divorce proceedings in Judge Bookstaver's court, separating Mrs. Mary E. Flack from her husband, were frandulent, though Mrs. Flack had never known of the divorce proceedings in her name till she was told of it by a Wohl'b reporter after the divorce had been granted was conceiled to be frandulent and false, and Joseph Mecks had confessed that the dates of the papers had been changed by him to accommodate Judge Bookstaver's tender conscience and the name of another attorney had been substituted for that of the late Ambrose Moneil, who figured in the case not only as attoricy for Sheriff Flack but also as Mrs. Flack's he figured in the case not only as attorney is Sheriff Flack but also as Mrs. Flack's Presiding Justice Van Brunt delivered the opinion of the Court exhaustingly, covering forty-one sheets of legal cap, closely written. The words of Justice Barretts, charge to which exception was taken by Judge Bussell were these:

"This judgment roll (the Flack divorce) is a record of a franculated divorce; of that there can be no doubt whatever. It is unquestionably fraudulent."
Judge Russell contended that that was a

Judge Russell contended that that was a matter for the jury to decide.

Again Justice Barrett said: "If the referre (Meeks had done his duty would she it. Mr. Again Justice Barrett said: "If the referre (Meeks had done his duty would she it. Mr. Again Smith, the boarding-house keeper have said she first knew Flack lifteen years ago as Reynolds? She says now that she never did."

Judge Russell also contended that Justice Barrett erred in saying that Meeks's excuse that his performance in alter ing the papers was with the consent of Judge Bookstaver was no excuse, the pleader insisting that Judge Bookstaver alone was the judge of whether the proceedings were regular and lawful or ind.

Justice Van Brunt's opinion, to which Justices Daniels and Brady assent, discusses all of these questions and decides them against the appellants, the whole concluding with these words:

An examination of the whole case shows that the instructions of the Jury. He repeatedly tall the jury that the guilt or innocence of the detendants was a question exclusively for them to determine.

fendants was a jumined to the mine.

When conceded acts were frauds upon the guirt because wholly unlawful, he so characterized them, as he was bound to de, and it was for him alone so to do. It is not the province of the jury to decide the legal effect of conceded acts.

Ex-Judge Horsce Russell will undoubtedly appeal the case to the Court of Appeals. He will try to get a stay from some other judge.
